Poverty Solutions, Detroit Partnership on Economic Mobility
Detroit, MI

Funded internships are available for Summer 2021 in Detroit, MI, working with the Detroit Partnership on Economic Mobility, a signature initiative of Poverty Solutions at U-M. The interns will report to Patrick Cooney, Assistant Director of Economic Mobility at Poverty Solutions, and Afton Branche-Wilson, Assistant Director of Community Initiatives at Poverty Solutions.

Summary
The Detroit Partnership on Economic Mobility is a partnership between Poverty Solutions at U-M, the City of Detroit, and community-based organizations across the city, focused on reducing poverty in Detroit. Poverty Solutions staff – together with our faculty experts – conduct action-oriented research to help inform, enhance, and evaluate collective efforts to improve economic opportunity in the city, and galvanize collective action from government, philanthropy, and non-profits around core economic mobility issues. We have a Detroit-based team that works closely with City departments and community groups across the city; we employ a team of Economic Mobility Fellows that work directly with City departments on strategic projects; we engage undergraduate and graduate research assistants from across the university to support our work; and we fund faculty research projects that shed new light on some of the most persistent problems facing Detroit residents, as well as potential solutions.

We pride ourselves on working in partnership with community in everything we do, co-creating our research agenda based on the concerns and needs of both residents and city leaders. We seek to confront and eliminate racism of all kinds through these research priorities and practical engagement. We view poverty as the result of many interlinked systems that fail to operate as they should for those with low incomes. Therefore, we work not in one area, but within and across a variety of systems, enabling us to intervene in a number of domains to make concrete improvements in the lives of Detroit residents with low incomes.

The Detroit Partnership on Economic Mobility is seeking research interns to work on Partnership projects in the summer of 2021. The interns will work with Poverty Solutions staff on action-oriented projects that may include:

- Researching national leading practices to reduce poverty and improve economic well-being;
- Contributing to partnership projects around early childhood education, eviction prevention, and the regulation of land contracts;
- Writing research briefs on innovative solutions that can be deployed at the local level to ease housing cost burden and reduce barriers to employment;
- Researching innovative financial products that cities have used to give residents a boost in economic mobility;
• Analyzing the economic impact of under-investing in regional transit in the Detroit metropolitan region;
• Researching innovative home repair programs in cities across the U.S.;
• Researching duplex housing in Detroit including conversions, rentals, landlord and Section 8 impacts;
• Researching innovative national practices around water affordability;
• Researching the impact of the City of Detroit’s inclusive development provisions;
• Assisting with other data and research projects as needed.

Applicant Requirements
• Excellent verbal and written communication skills;
• Ability to work well under the direction of others and to take ownership of projects independently;
• Experience collecting a large amount of information, and distilling results into action-oriented policy briefs;
• Strong skills in Excel, and ability to master new software applications;
• Ability to maintain a high level of accuracy in collecting and analyzing data;
• Effective organizational skills.

Location
As of now, these positions will be operating remotely.

Application Process
Students interested in being considered for these internships should submit a resume and a one-page statement of interest. In your statement, you are encouraged to identify your interest in working on poverty reduction and improving economic well-being, and the skills/experience you would bring to the team. Please also highlight policy areas that are of particular interest to you. You may wish to describe your career interests and discuss your previous work and educational experiences demonstrating these interests. Materials will be reviewed as they are received and should be submitted by Monday, March 8, 2021. Submit to cooneypb@umich.edu and betrevor@umich.edu or at the Poverty Solutions Website: https://poverty.umich.edu/students/work-opportunities/

The position will be paid at a rate of $16/hr, in-line with our pay rate for all graduate students. The individual employed in this role can work up to 40 hours per week, and can work as many weeks as he/she is able to between academic terms. Poverty Solutions and the chosen candidates will come to an agreement on the exact term of employment.

Transportation, lodging, and expenses for the internship are the responsibility of the student. The internship is available to graduate students from the University of Michigan. Poverty Solutions will work with units on campus to ensure the internship meets any designated internship requirements.
